My Stem Cell Story

It's Tuesday February 17th and I'm in a tiny Mexican border town about to receive my first stem cell treatment. I have had the often debilitating autoimmune disease Chronic Fatigue Immune Dysfunction Syndrome/CFIDS for 25 years. I have been everywhere from Mayo Clinic to the Faith Healers in the Philippines seeking relief with only minimal help. Around the first of this year, I learned that everyone who has CFIDS develops Cardiomyopathy and a Hiatal Hernia. I had both. The most promising treatment I was told, were Stem Cells. Hours of daily web research, emails to stem cell doctors around the world, and numerous conversations with patients who have received stem cell treatment, led me to choose Dr. Omar Gonzalez in Mexico.

Dr. Gonzalez is an MD who first received Placenta Stem Cell training in France over 18 years ago. What intrigued me is that he also studied Acupuncture and Chinese Herbal Medicine in Beijing, China and was the first Certified Acupuncturist in Mexico. His application of stem cells is unique in that he places the stem cells along each patient's weakest meridians. As a proponent of natural treatments and Eastern philosophy, I liked this approach a lot.

So here I stand, about to open the office door on another healing adventure.

I step inside and am immediately greeted by lovely people in this immaculate place of white walls and tile. My eyes roam from spot to spot where spiritual art and statues from around the world are placed. They have been gifts from his patients. I feel completely at ease. He extends his hand to shake mine, introduces himself, and we begin with my patient history.

He then has me sit at a laptop, and I place my hands and feet on stainless steel plates to get the coolest electrodermal test I've ever had. I watch the model of a human skeleton revolve on the laptop screen while the computer reads my body's frequency patterns. Dr. Gonzalez explains that the computer screen will soon highlight in yellow, organs and glands in trouble then will list in priority what needs addressing. #1 on my list is my heart/Cardiomyopathy and #2 is my hiatal hernia.

At this point Dr. Gonzalez has decided where to place the stem cells, and it is time for the treatment. As Acupuncturists do, Dr. Gonzalez pushes around each placement area asking me to identify the sorest spot. He marks the spots, his nurse sterilizes them, and he gives me a local anesthetic in each.

The spots are numb now and we're ready. Dr. Gonzalez makes a tiny incision on my breastbone at the heart meridian, places the little cell bundle under my skin, and closes with one stitch. As he places the next 3 bundles, I notice a warm comforting glow inside my chest where the heart stem cells are. I feel an unexpected sense of blissful peace come over me.

It has been 3 months now since my stem cell treatment. During the first 3 weeks, the healing was the most intense. It is typical during that time for patients to have flu like episodes with a slight temperature while the stem cells do major repairs. After the second flu like period, my 15 year hiatal hernia was gone. I mean gone! By the end of the first month, my body temperature that had been subnormal for the whole 25 years of CFIDS, was back to normal.

As for my heart, I had been having progressively worsening heart symptoms for 20 years. Heart palpitations and periods of heart racing had grown common. And for the past few years, my heart would often wake me up at night. It felt like it was bubbling or flopping over. Electrocardiograms over the years had turned out normal and some doctors simply told me that CFIDS could be hard on the heart. My instincts told me that getting the normal heart tests would not find the problem. So I asked for guidance and waited for signs to show me what to do.

One day, while web surfing for the latest in CFIDS info and treatments, I stumbled upon the 2003 Peckerman study which found that virtually everyone with CFIDS has Cardiomyopathy. Cardiomyopathy was identified by the medical community ten years ago as a heart muscle dysfunction that prevents the heart from pumping enough blood thereby preventing the supply of adequate oxygen and nutrients to all body tissue.

Stem Cell Treatment has been used successfully for 3 decades in Europe to heal many conditions including heart conditions. I can tell you from my experience that since receiving stem cells, there has not been 1 night when my heart has awakened me. Over the first month, I noticed my heart becoming calmer and going back to normal. I cannot find words to express how much this has restored my sense of wellbeing.

Today, my placenta stem cells have made some debilitating symptoms disappear and have reduced others. While I am not entirely well, I am grateful for the improvements. In July I will return for my second stem cell treatment. I've spoken with Placenta Stem Cell recipients who had many different illnesses. Some needed only one treatment to get well, others needed two or three. Some say they are 100% better, and some 70-80%. I spoke with one woman who said that stem cells had not reversed her illness but had eliminated other conditions giving her relief. I don't know what my end result will be. I do know that the first treatment was significant, so I will return.
